

Sumerix Global Internship

Domain: Data Analytics & Business Intelligence

Task 2: Global Superstore Sales Comparative Analysis

KPI Overview

- Total sales amount: ~ 9 M
- Total profit incurred: ~ 1.03 M
- Total profit margin: 2,520.44 ~ 11.76%
- Average order value(AOV): 572.31
- No. of customers: 4873

Business Insights

➤ Regional Performance

South region generates the highest revenue, while Central Asia generates the least.

➤ Category Performance

Office Supplies product category has the highest profit margin.

➤ Customer analysis

The most valuable customers segment is Consumer.

➤ Discount Analysis

Discounts affect profitability, discounts above 25% lead to losses.

➤ Trend analysis

Months ranging from September to December are observed as the best sales months indicating a seasonal sales trend.

Recommendations for business growth:

1. Find out why Central Asia is underperforming using following ways:

- Look into whether Central Asia has fewer customers, fewer sales reps, or less marketing support.
 - Try a small marketing push in Central Asia for one quarter and see if sales improve.
 - Study what is working well in the South region and see if the same ideas can be used elsewhere.
2. Give Technology more marketing focus and stock priority, since it already earns strong profit.
3. Set a clear limit on how much discount can be given:
- Encourage a discount level close to 7%, since this seems to work best for profit.
 - Set a maximum discount limit (for example, 15–20%), so discounts above that need manager approval.
 - Share this finding with the sales team so they understand how discounts affect profit, not just sales volume.
4. Give premium offers and benefits to the Consumer segment to keep them engaged as they are most the valuable customers.
5. Plan ahead for the profitable seasonal months:
- Make sure there is enough stock and staff ready before it arrives.
 - Start offering deals a little earlier (e.g. September) to attract early buyers.
 - Look at what products sell best in these months so next year's planning can focus on those items.